

Newsletter 38

Fitbit Recalls One Million Ionic Watches after Burn Injuries

Over 100 people have reported batteries overheating in Fitbit's Ionic watches.

---

Instructions:

Listen to the audio file and then answer the following questions.

Section 1

- What were the burn injuries caused by?
  - overheating batteries
  - electrical shocks
  - broken chargers

- What information does the reporter give about the product?
  - its price and model number
  - its apps and features
  - its size and material

- What did Fitbit tell consumers to do?
  - bring the watches to a recycling center
  - contact the company for packaging to return the watches
  - change the batteries in the watches

- Why is Google mentioned in the report?
  - Google owns a competing smartwatch company.
  - Fitbit is owned by Google.
  - Google owns a brand of batteries.

- How many people were burned by the watches?
  - 78
  - 100
  - 300

Steve's helpful course

<https://www.udemy.com/course/curso-de-ingles-para-iniciantes-completo/?referralCode=83D0E7D15AAFDD34A749>

<https://www.udemy.com/course/aprenda-rapidamente-o-ingles-britanico-e-divirta-se-curso5/?referralCode=EE98448F2882596E378C>